

CONTENTS

| | |
|-------------------------------|----|
| Foreword by Eric Schwitzgebel | ix |
| Acknowledgments | xi |

FIRST PART: PRELIMINARIES

| | | |
|------------------------|--|----|
| Messages to the reader | 3 | |
| Chapter I | In which Marco asks Russ about reading, but he responds about presuppositions | 11 |
| Chapter II | Russ performs a small study that surprises Marco | 24 |
| Chapter III | Russ presumes to identify Marco's presuppositions | 35 |
| Chapter IV | Marco's questionnaire and a "boot-like" sentence | 41 |
| Chapter V | Contrasting broad experience and pristine experience, with Amsterdam as an example | 54 |
| Chapter VI | In which Marco sends Russ his paper on the experience of reading McCarthy's The Road ; Russ hesitates but then critiques it | 68 |

SECOND PART: PHENOMENA

| | | |
|--------------|---|-----|
| Chapter VII | Phenomena and how to explore them | 83 |
| Chapter VIII | In which Marco rankles at Russ's emphasis on delusion, and they discuss the existence of experience | 95 |
| Chapter IX | Great Expectations and genies reveal something about knowing others' experience | 100 |

| | | |
|--------------|---|-----|
| Chapter X | Pristine experience, broad experience, presuppositions, and tendencies; Russ challenges James Joyce | 110 |
| Chapter XI | On the adulteration of pristine experience | 130 |
| Chapter XII | Phenomena, adulteration, apples, and turkey | 136 |
| Chapter XIII | Pristine experience : broad experience :: phenomena : not phenomena | 147 |
| Chapter XIV | Phenomena, mental states, judgments, and hunger | 169 |

THIRD PART: PERSONAL

| | | |
|---------------|--|-----|
| Chapter XV | Getting even more personal | 183 |
| Chapter XVI | Similarity and familiarity, scams, and the fight to the death | 198 |
| Chapter XVII | Marco wears the beeper | 210 |
| Chapter XVIII | Ultimately personal: Twenty-four moments of Marco's pristine experience | 217 |
| Chapter XIX | A very small quibble on wording | 233 |
| Chapter XX | Salient characteristics of Marco's experience as characterized by Russ | 243 |
| Chapter XXI | Two more quibbles on wording | 249 |

FOURTH PART: CLARIFICATIONS

| | | |
|---------------|---|-----|
| Chapter XXII | Where Russ transitions back to the general | 263 |
| Chapter XXIII | Feeling hooks inside one's chest; metaphor and experience | 285 |
| Chapter XXIV | Metaphor tables | 294 |
| Chapter XXV | Retrospective inspections | 301 |
| Chapter XXVI | In lieu of a conclusion | 314 |
| Works Cited | | 317 |
| Index | | 323 |