

---

---

CONTENTS

Preface and Acknowledgments	vii
------------------------------------	-----

INTRODUCTION

Empire and Remapping Realism

(a) Space, Form, Content: The Fate of Distance	1
(b) Imperial Knowledge, Colonial Knowledge: The Fate of Difference	9
(c) The Problem with Progress: The Fate of Fiction	13
(d) Précis of Chapters	20

PART I.

Balzac and the Problem of Empiricism

CHAPTER 1. Empiricism and Empire: *La Peau de chagrin 27

(a) The Orientalist Paradox and the Object(s) of Empire	29
(b) Seeing as Knowing: Realism and the Matter of Disenchantment	36

Chapter 2. Marginal Realism in *Le Père Goriot 47

(a) The World Without: The Mandarin and the Subject(s) of Empire	48
(b) The World Below: Vautrin on Being Seen and Known	53
(c) “À nous deux!”: An Ethics of Disenchantment	60

Chapter 3. Realism, Romance, and *La Fille aux yeux d’or 65

(a) The World in Paris: Paquita Valdès and the Ubiquity of the Foreign	66
(b) Unmapping Paris: The Space of Enchantment	70
(c) On Seeing and Not Seeing: A Sense of Disenchantment	78

PART II.

Trollope and the Problem of Integration

Chapter 4. Economies of Romance and History in Phineas Finn	87
(a) “The Colonies Next Door”: Irishness as a Realist Fact	89
(b) The Bildung of Phineas Finn: Irishness as a Realist Problem	94
(c) Unrealist History: On Pretending Not to Know	101
Chapter 5. Mapping and Unmapping Phineas Finn and Phineas Redux	109
(a) The Space of Disenchantment	110
(b) Loughlinter, London, and the Space of Reenchantment	117
(c) On Not Knowing: Detection, Empiricism, and the Verdict on the Evidence	124
Chapter 6. Global London and The Way We Live Now	131
(a) Business as Unusual: Foreignness, Crime, Commerce	132
(b) “Metropolitan Danger”: Melmotte and the (Other) Americans	136
(c) Unrealist City: The New Mobility and the Way We Lived Then	143

PART III.

Fontane and the Problem of Familiarity

Chapter 7. “Berlin wird Weltstadt”: Nation, City, and World in Cécile	155
(a) Nation and World in Fontane’s Early Fiction	157
(b) Region, Romance, and the Rails	163
(c) Business as Usual: Berlin and the Banality of the Foreign	167
Chapter 8. The Imaginative Geography of Effi Briest	175
(a) Unreal Realism: Imperial Knowledge and Space	177
(b) Secularization and the Place of Enchantment	182
(c) Dueling Epistemologies and the Chinese Ghost	188
(d) Effi’s End: Disenchanted Enchantment	193
Conclusion: The Limits of “Realism”	205
(a) Realism and Romance, Reconsidered	205
(b) Epilogue	209
Works Cited	215
Index	233