

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	ix
INTRODUCTION • EVOLUTION AND THE DREAMY MIND	1
I. Corporeal Spirit: The Evolution and Dissolution of Mind	14
II. Will, Automatism, and Spiritual Experience	21
III. The Realist Novel and the Dreamy Mind	27
CHAPTER 1 • CHARLOTTE BRONTË'S HYPOCHONDRIACAL HEROINES	33
I. Hypochondriasis, Self-Control, and the Evolution of Consciousness	40
II. Rapture and Realism in Jane Eyre	47
III. Villette : Demonic Imagination and the Repellent Real	55
CHAPTER 2 • SPIRITS AND SEIZURES IN BLEAK HOUSE AND OUR MUTUAL FRIEND	64
I. Ghosts in the Brain	68
II. Epilepsy and the Vanishing Self: Bleak House	74
III. The Disembodied Voices of Our Mutual Friend	83

CHAPTER 3 • SUSPENDED ANIMATION AND SECOND SIGHT: DANIEL DERONDA AND SILAS MARNER	91
I. Greater and Lesser Minds	93
II. Vision and Deanimation in Daniel Deronda	98
III. Catalepsy in Silas Marner	107
CHAPTER 4 • DREAMY INTUITION AND DETECTIVE GENIUS: EZRA JENNINGS AND SHERLOCK HOLMES	122
I. Mesmerism, Dreamy Degeneracy, and Literary Form	125
II. Medical Science and Mysticism in The Moonstone	129
III. The Savage Genius of Sherlock Holmes	135
CHAPTER 5 • THE END OF THE NOVEL: NATURALISM AND REVERIE IN TESS OF THE D'URBERVILLES AND THE RETURN OF THE NATIVE	152
I. The Novel and the Modern Ache	153
II. Automatism and Escape from the Modern	159
III. Hallucination and Insight	167
IV. Vision in Poetry	174
CONCLUSION	181
Notes	185
Works Cited	213
Index	229