BIBLIOGRAPHY

Limited, in general, to basic books on the history of British art (1760–1900), major books on painters prominent in this study, the more important books and articles devoted to the illustration of English literary works (the remainder are cited at appropriate places in the source notes), and other items referred to more than three or four times in the notes. Of the many scores of exhibition catalogues examined, only a few—the most important for present purposes—are included here.
