Toward a Working-Class Canon

Literary Criticism in British Working-Class Periodicals, 1816–1858

Paul Thomas Murphy

Ohio State University Press

Columbus
Copyright © 1994 by the Ohio State University Press
All rights reserved.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Murphy, Paul Thomas, 1957–
    Toward a working-class canon : literary criticism in British working-class periodicals, 1816–1858 / Paul Thomas Murphy.
p. cm. — (Studies in Victorian life and literature)
    Includes bibliographical references (p.) and index.
    ISBN 0–8142–0654–9
    1. English literature—19th century—History and criticism—
Theory, etc. 2. Working class—Great Britain—Books and reading—History—19th century. 3. Working class writings, English—History and criticism. 4. Criticism—Great Britain—History—19th century.
5. Canon (Literature) I. Title. II. Series.
PR451.M87 1994
820.9'008—dc20 94-25458
CIP

Text design by Victoria Althoff.
Jacket design by Gore Design.
Type set in Baskerville.
Printed by McNaughton & Gunn, Inc. Saline, Michigan.
The paper in this book meets the guidelines for permanence and durability of the Committee on Production Guidelines for Book Longevity of the Council on Library Resources.
For

Thomas Dominic Murphy

and

Miranda Elizabeth Murphy
Contents

Acknowledgments / ix

Introduction / 1

1. Schoolmasters Abroad / 7
   The Working-Class Press, 1816–1858

2. A Sense of Canon / 32
   A Literary History

3. “Imagination Flaps Its Sportive Wings” / 62
   Views of Fiction

4. “Impassioned Truth” / 97
   Views of Poetry

5. The Drama and the Dramatic / 149

Conclusion / 164

Notes / 170

Bibliography / 185

Index / 199
Acknowledgments

I am extremely grateful for the help of many librarians, in both the United States and the United Kingdom, for their efforts in digging up stacks of working-class periodicals, often at short notice. I would particularly like to thank the staffs of the British Library, the British Newspaper Library at Colindale, the Public Record Office, London, the Bodleian and Nuffield College Libraries at Oxford, the Mitchell Library in Glasgow, the National Library of Scotland, the Edinburgh Public Library, the Boston College Library, the Boston Public Library, and the Harvard University Library. Most of my research I conducted at the Norlin Library at the University of Colorado, Boulder, an undertaking not as insane as it might at first sound, thanks in large part to the extremely efficient staffs of the microforms department and the interlibrary loan service.

I have been extremely fortunate in having strong advice and superb readers at every stage of this project. Thanks are due to David Simpson and John Graham, who offered a number of valuable suggestions in the beginning. Thanks, too, to Keith Thomas, Kelley Hurley, Michael Preston, and Lee Chambers-Schiller, all of whom read early drafts. Patrick Brantlinger, then editor of Victorian Studies, read and commented on the fiction chapter, which appeared in modified form in that periodical. Richard Altick helped with that chapter as well, and was a reader of the full draft for the Ohio State University Press, along with R. K. Webb. I can't thank both of them enough for their suggestions. My wife, Victoria Tuttle, put up with me heroically, proofread this work tirelessly, and made many good suggestions. Some of these I may have crankily resisted, then accepted—but she was right each time, and I believe this work is far better than it would have been without her help.

I’m especially grateful for the moral and intellectual support of James Kincaid, who was helpful in reading and advising from the earliest stages of this project until its end.

ix
Acknowledgments

I wish to thank as well family, friends, and colleagues, whose kindnesses are far too many to list. I do particularly want to thank Stephen Button and Linda Gough, who put me up for the weeks I was researching in London, and who provided me with therapeutic diversion from that research. Thank you all.