Wayne C. Booth is emeritus professor of English at the University of Chicago. His most recent books are The Company We Keep: An Ethics of Fiction and The Art of Growing Older, an anthology of poetry with extensive commentary that he considers astonishingly wise. He is now struggling to complete approximately five and one-half projects, all of them more important than anything he has yet written.

Ross Chambers teaches French and Comparative Literature at the University of Michigan. Having recently published Room for Maneuver and The Writing of Melancholy, both at the University of Chicago Press, he is now creeping up in leisurely fashion on Loiterature.

Barbara Foley is Associate Professor of English at Rutgers University, Newark Campus. She has written articles on Marxist criticism, African American literature, and literary theory and has authored two books: Telling the Truth: The Theory and Practice of Documentary Fiction and Radical Representations: Politics and Form in U.S. Proletarian Fiction, 1929–1941.

Elizabeth Langland is Professor of English at the University of Florida. She is the author of Society in the Novel and *Ann Brontë: The Other One, and coeditor of A Feminist Perspective in the Academy: The Difference It Makes, The Voyage In: Fictions of Female Development, and Out of Bounds: Male Writers and Gender(ed) Criticism. She has published articles in PMLA, Critical Inquiry, Studies in the Novel, and elsewhere and has recently completed a book about domestic ideology and representations of middle-class women in Victorian culture.

Judith Mayne is Professor of French and Women's Studies at Ohio State University. She is the author of several books on film studies, including Cinema and Spectatorship (1993) and the forthcoming Directed by Dorothy Arzner.

Susan McClary is Professor of Musicology in the Faculty of Music, McGill University. Her most recent books include Feminine Endings: Music, Gender, and Sexuality and Georges Bizet: “Carmen.” In 1993 she delivered the Ernest Bloch Lectures (University of California–Berkeley), which will be published as Conventional Wisdom: The Content of Musical Form. A collection of her essays, De-Tonations: Narrative and Signification in “Absolute” Music, is forthcoming from Wesleyan University Press.

Thomas G. Pavel teaches Comparative Literature and Romance Languages and Literatures at Princeton University. His books include The Poetics of Plot: The Case of English Renaissance Drama, Fictional Worlds, and The Feud of Language: A History of Structuralist Thought.

James Phelan teaches English at Ohio State University. He has written Worlds from Words, Reading People, Reading Plots, and Beyond the Tenure Track. He has also edited Reading Narrative, and currently serves as editor of Narrative, the journal of the Society for the Study of Narrative Literature. His essay in this volume is part of a book-in-progress on narrative dynamics.

Mary Louise Pratt is Professor of Spanish and Comparative Literature at Stanford University, where she teaches courses on Latin American literature, criticism and colonialism, and literary and cultural theory. Her books include Toward a Speech Act Theory of Literary Discourse, Linguistics for Students of Literature, Women, Culture and Politics in Latin America, and Imperial Eyes: Travel Writing and Transculturation.

Peter J. Rabinowitz, author of Before Reading: Narrative Conventions and the Politics of Interpretation, divides his time between music and narrative theory. His published articles cover a wide range of subjects, from Dostoevsky to Mrs. E.D.E.N. Southworth, from detective fiction to the ideology of musical structure, from Mahler to Scott Joplin. A professor of comparative literature at Hamilton College, he is also an active music critic and a contributing editor of Fanfare.

THE THEORY AND INTERPRETATION OF NARRATIVE

James Phelan
and Peter J. Rabinowitz,
Editors

Because the series editors believe that the most significant work in narrative studies today contributes both to our knowledge of specific narratives and to our understanding of narrative in general, studies in the series typically offer interpretations of individual narratives and address significant theoretical issues underlying those interpretations. The series does not privilege any one critical perspective but is open to work from any strong theoretical position.
