that precipitated the concepts of romanticism, and from the vantage point of two centuries, the importance of the Jubilee is its place in the history of ideas, and its most amazing aspect is the speed and unanimity with which the romantic attitudes were adopted.

Any actor will mirror as much of his age as is accessible to him, and the life of Garrick's age was accessible to him to a superlative degree, for he was peculiarly in a position to reflect the great minds of his day—and he was a true mirror. Garrick's Jubilee is an account of a unique occasion when perhaps the greatest actor who ever lived, rejecting all prudential advice, went to Stratford as Steward of a Jubilee and mirrored his age—not in its more obvious surfaces, but in its latent forces, its potentialities.

Martha Winburn England is assistant professor of English at Queens College of the City University of New York.
Other titles of interest . . .

The Arundel Harington Manuscript of Tudor Poetry

Edited by Ruth Hughey

"... A monumental and exciting achievement."—Alastair Fowler, Notes and Queries. 2 vols., $15.00 the set

---

Jane Austen's Novels: The Fabric of Dialogue

By Howard S. Babb

A stylistically grounded analysis of Jane Austen's fiction. "[Mr. Babb] discloses far more in the texture of Jane Austen's writing . . . than most of us can have seen, and he always relates it effectively to the important purposes of the novels." — New Statesman. $4.95

---

Forthcoming . . .

The Letters of John Ruskin to Lord and Lady Mount-Temple

Edited by John Lewis Bradley

Ruskin's own correspondence concerning his frantic, indeed psychotic, obsession for a young girl named Rose La Touche during what is probably the most tragic period in the life of the Victorian genius.